

INSEAD is widely recognised among the world's top-tier Business Schools as one of the most innovative and influential. It is the only Business School with fully fledged campuses in Asia (Singapore) and Europe (Fontainebleau). The INSEAD-Wharton Alliance, announced in May 2001, combines INSEAD's resources with those of Wharton's campuses in Philadelphia and San Francisco, to deliver business education and research across a global learning network.

INSEAD recently built the state-of-the-Art Plessis-Mornay facilities in Fontainebleau (France) to provide a flexible, innovative learning environments. According to General Contractor Atholl Simpson from Albion, KI furniture was chosen for the lecture rooms based on quality, comfort and the ease of working with the KI rep; KI was not the lowest bid but it was the best choice. Atholl Simpson adds: "we selected KI University Seating with Power Up modules with custom laminates to match wall and doors and it was really very attractive"

INSEAD also chose the "Wharton Lectern"; Atholl Simpson explains: "We were looking for several months to find a lectern according to our requirements and when KI offered theirs we found it! KI established a direct communication between the Green Bay based D & D Department and our IT consultant and tailored the lectern for power and motor to meet the European and French standards without any problems". KI has also provided all the furniture requirements for Wharton in Philadelphia and San Francisco. This is another good example of KI's excellent global and local capabilities.
